The Armenian prime ministers visit to Türkiye signals a historic thaw, eyeing peace, trade and regional reset

Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyans June 2025 visit to Türkiye marks a watershed moment in the protracted and often turbulent history of Turkish-Armenian relations. For the first time, an Armenian leader is engaging in direct, high-level talks with President Recep Tayyip Erdoğan, signaling a willingness on both sides to move beyond entrenched grievances and explore a pragmatic path forward.

The backdrop to this visit is a rapidly shifting regional landscape. Since the 2020 Karabakh war and Azerbaijans subsequent consolidation of control over the region, Armenia has found itself in a period of deep introspection and strategic recalibration. Pashinyans government, facing both domestic turbulence and external pressure, has sought to redefine Armenias foreign policy priorities.
