While the European Commission presented its digital strategy last week, Frances economy and finance ministry brought together around a hundred experts on Monday (24 February) in an attempt to sketch out ways of regulating online platforms. EURACTIVs partner La Tribune reports.

Spurred on by the European Commission, the finance ministry has started to work on the regulation of digital platforms.

Economy and Finance Minister Bruno Le Maire and Secretary of State for Digital Affairs Cédric O had organised a working seminar on Monday (24 February) with around a hundred experts from various EU institutions and member states.
