Foreign ministers of five Central Asian nations and the United States have reaffirmed commitment to resolving the situation in Afghanistan during a C5+1 meeting on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly session in New York, the Kazakh foreign ministry said on Thursday.

The meeting took place on Wednesday with the participation of Kazakh Foreign Minister Mukhtar Tileuberdi, US State Secretary Antony Blinken, Kyrgyz Foreign Minister Ruslan Kazakbaev, Tajik Foreign Minister Sirojiddin Mukhriddin, Turkmen Foreign Minister Rashid Meredov and Uzbek Foreign Minister Abdulaziz Kamilov.

"During the talks, a wide range of issues on the bilateral, regional and international agenda were discussed, including upcoming meetings at the highest and high levels, the current situation in Afghanistan and the promotion of the inter-Afghan dialogue, and more," the ministry said in a statement.
