President Xi Jinping will chair the two-day inaugural China-Central Asia summit starting May 18, the Chinese foreign ministry announced on Monday.

Xi's counterparts from the five Central Asian states — Kazakhstan, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan, Kyrgyzstan and Turkmenistan — would attend the summit in the northwestern Chinese city of Xian, the ministry said.

The highly anticipated C+C5 summit is seen as a Beijing-led mission to boost strategic cooperation with Central Asia on a raft of issues, including its Belt and Road Initiative and efforts to end the war in Ukraine.
