NATO officials emphasize that Serbia is an important partner for peace and stability, while NATO respects Serbias decision on military neutrality. They also highlight progress in cooperation in many areas. Despite cooperation in various fields, Serbian citizens remain uninformed about that. The NATO Military Liaison Office in Belgrade has existed since 2006 and has been the main link between the Alliance and the authorities in Belgrade for more than 17 years. Since then, Serbia and NATO have significantly improved their cooperation, although this is rarely discussed in public.

About the NATO cooperation with Serbia and the security situation in the Western Balkans region, we spoke with the Chief of NATO Military Liaison Office Belgrade, Brigadier General Giampiero Romano.
