'There has been no change in operating status of missions in the region,' says State Department spokesperson.

The US on Monday said there has been no change in the operating status of missions in the region following reports that US military bases in Europe over the weekend were placed on high alert.

"I will let my colleagues at the Department of Defense speak to any posture change or anything as it relates to their facilities. What I can say about our embassies and consulate is that there has been no change in operating status of missions in the region," State Department deputy spokesman Vedant Patel told reporters.
