'I think that's achievable, and it's manifestly in the interests of both Azerbaijan and Armenia, as well as the broader region,' says Blinken.

US Secretary of State Antony Blinken on Monday said a peace agreement between Azerbaijan and Armenia is achievable.

I was speaking just about a week ago to (Azerbaijani) President (Ilham) Aliyev on this I think that's achievable, and it's manifestly in the interests of both Azerbaijan and Armenia, as well as the broader region, Blinken said in remarks at the Brookings Institution in Washington, DC.
