An inevitable truth is emerging: The hard-right populists are here to stay and are calling the sin EU politics.	shots
Two recent major political decisions   the appointment of the new European Commission vote to gut a deforestation bill   have cemented the EUs new power center squarely on the shoulder of the center-right European Peoples Party — and allies to its right.
Some experts reckoned Junes European election results meant the blocs centrists would be stave off a unified hard right in the European Parliament after the EPP continued its reign as largest group in the legislature. But right-wing political forces such as the European Conserva and Reformists (ECR) have proven to be the real powerbrokers in recent weeks.	s the
