Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan has said that Armenia offered to withdraw the EU Monitoring Mission from sections of the border with Azerbaijan that have been delimited.

Pashinyan made the comments in a one-and-a-half long hour interview with the public broadcaster on 22 November.

During the interview, he was asked to comment on a post on X made by Farid Shafiyev, the chair of an Azerbaijani pro-government think tank, in which he suggested there were three sticking points in the peace talks: alleged territorial claims in the Armenian Constitution, international legal warfare, and the withdrawal of EU observers from the Armenian-Azerbaijani border.
