Russia has completed the withdrawal of its border guards from Armenias sole border crossing with Iran, Prime Minister Nikol Pashinian announced on Monday.

Starting today, only the Border Guard Troops of the Republic of Armenia will carry out border control at the Agarak border crossing point on the Armenia-Iran state border, Pashinian wrote on Facebook. He thanked the Russian border guards for their decades-long service there.

Pashinian and Russian President Vladimir Putin reportedly agreed on the withdrawal during talks in Moscow in October. The agreement came just over two months after the Russians left Yerevans Zvartnots international airport.
