Member of the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Denis Bećirović, pointed out in Brussels on Tuesday the importance of NATO's proactive action in BiH, calling for ensuring the long-term presence of NATO forces in military bases in BiH, as this would be the best prevention of the disruption of peace and security in the country and the region. He stressed that Bosnia and Herzegovina should be even more firmly institutionally incorporated into the Alliances security framework.

This implies an increased NATO presence in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the adoption of a strategic concept that strengthens security guarantees for Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the development of concrete plans for political and military action in crisis situations, Bećirović said in his address to members of the North Atlantic Council (NAC) in Brussels.

He said that today's meeting, at the highest level, once again shows that Bosnia and Herzegovina is important for the Alliance and that it is very important to accelerate the country's Euro-Atlantic path.
