George Simion, a pro-Trump ultranationalist, had alleged foreign interference in rerun vote won by Nicușor Dan

Romanias top court has unanimously rejected an application by the defeated far-right candidate in Sundays presidential election rerun, George Simion, to annul the vote on the grounds of foreign interference.

Following deliberations, the constitutional court unanimously rejected the request * as unfounded, the court said in statement on Thursday, adding that its decision was final and it would publish its full reasoning at a later date.
