Türkiye Today (23 May 2025)

Türkiye expects suitable conditions to emerge for Azerbaijan and Armenia to sign their peace agreement, the Turkish National Security Council announced Thursday following a meeting chaired by President Recep Tayyip Erdogan.

The security council statement highlighted satisfaction that Baku and Yerevan have reached consensus on a draft peace treaty between the two South Caucasus nations.

"Meeting participants noted their satisfaction that Azerbaijan and Armenia have reached consensus on the draft peace agreement and reiterated expectations for ensuring the necessary conditions to establish a final peace, the results of which will benefit all parties in the region," the council statement said.
