Iranian President Masoud Pezeshkian has said his upcoming visits to Armenia and Belarus will focus on boosting the role of Iranian private companies and advancing previous agreements, particularly joint investment projects, Iranian state media reported.

Pezeshkian made the remarks on Sunday during a meeting with senior officials to review Iran's relations with Armenia and Belarus, Mehr News Agency reported citing a press release by Pezeshkian's office.

According to the report, the discussions focused on potential collaboration in key sectors, including energy, transportation, trade, investment, healthcare, environment, science, culture, and tourism.
