Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi said on Tuesday that Beijing is ready to cooperate with Malaysia in the fields of artificial intelligence (AI), new energy, and digital economy.

Wang made the remarks during his meeting with Nushirwan bin Zainal Abidin, director-general of Malaysia's National Security Council, in Beijing, according to the state-run Xinhua News.

China is willing to work together with Malaysia to strengthen the alignment of development strategies, deepen political and security cooperation, push for more outcomes in practical cooperation, and continuously elevate strategic cooperation between the two countries, Wang said.
