Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said on January 29 that none of the concerns raised by experts regarding the construction of a new nuclear power plant unit would be overlooked, stressing that decisions would be made only after all outstanding questions are addressed.

Speaking at a briefing following a government meeting, Pashinyan said Armenia is continuing discussions with multiple countries that possess nuclear technology, including France, the United States, Russia, South Korea, and China, Caliber.Az reports per Armenian media.

At the moment, we are working with all our partners □ France, the United States, Russia, South Korea, and China □ and the necessary decisions will be made after receiving reliable answers to all possible questions, Pashinyan said.
