The Straits Times (20 February 2026)

Japanese Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi warned of growing Chinese coercion in her first post-election speech to Parliament on Feb 20, and pledged to overhaul defence strategy, ease curbs on military exports and strengthen critical supply chains.

Ms Takaichis four-month tenure has been marked by a diplomatic dispute with China, after she said Japan could deploy military force to counter any attack on Taiwan that also threatened Japanese territory.

After turning a fragile majority into a landslide victory in Februarys Lower House election, Ms Takaichi outlined an agenda aimed at countering what she sees as a growing economic and security threat from China and its regional partners.
