Kazakhstan plans to launch 200 new enterprises worth 1.7 trillion tenge ($3.5 billion) in 2026, where nearly 20,000 people are expected to be employed, President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev said, Trend reports via the press service of the Kazakh President.

Tokayev made the remark during the III Republican Forum of Deputies of Maslikhats of all levels, held at the Independence Palace in Astana.

According to the president, the government has begun building a new industrial, energy, and infrastructure framework for the country aimed at addressing long-standing economic imbalances. He noted that growth in the manufacturing sector has exceeded 6% for two consecutive years, strengthening the economic base of Kazakhstans regions.
