Kazakhstan currently ensures the transit of 80% of overland cargo shipments from China to Europe, the country's Minister of Transport says.

This was published by the press service of the Kazakh government in a press-release, following the country's Transport Minister Nurlan Sauranbayev's speech during a cabinet meeting.

"Transit has become the main driver of the domestic railway sector. Over the past five years, transit shipments have increased from 20 million to 33 million tons. Our task is to accelerate this momentum in the coming decades," Sauranbayev said.
