Serbian President Aleksandar Vucic said today, at a ceremony marking the commissioning of the youngest officers of the Serbian Armed Forces, that Kosovo is part of Serbia under both the Constitution and God's justice, and that this must be remembered and that holy trust preserved.

"What you pledged to uphold today is respect for the Constitution and the preservation of Serbia's territorial integrity. I know the kind of pressure you, as well as the political leadership, will face. We have nothing holier or more important than this. Kosovo and Metohija is part of our homeland, part of Serbia, both under the Constitution and by God's justice. We must remember that and preserve that holy trust. Without provoking anyone, attacking anyone, or threatening anyone, but always remaining our own on our own land," Vucic emphasized at the "General Jovan Miskovic" barracks in Banjica.

He pointed out that military alliances had been formed in the region against Serbia.
