South Korea and Chile on Thursday have agreed to reactivate their joint free trade agreement committee for the first time in a decade to strengthen bilateral trade and modernize their landmark trade pact, Yonhap News reported.

The announcement was made by South Korean President Lee Jae Myung after summit talks with Chilean President Jose Antonio Kast.

Speaking at a joint press conference in Santiago, Lee said the two countries had agreed to deepen cooperation in trade and investment and update the South Korea-Chile free trade pact, which entered into force in 2004.
