Indonesia, Malaysia and Singapore are holding a joint maritime security exercise in Indonesia's Riau Islands aimed at strengthening coordination in some of Southeast Asia's busiest waterways, state media reported Tuesday.

The three-day exercise, which began Monday, brings together Indonesia's Maritime Security Agency, the Singapore Police Coast Guard and the Malaysian Maritime Enforcement Agency, Indonesia's official Antara news agency reported.

Sixty personnel are taking part in the drill, which runs through Wednesday and is being held as part of a high-level meeting on tripartite coast guard cooperation.
