The EU intends to significantly expand sanctions against Russia in the coming months, EU Commission policy chief Kaja Kallas told a German newspaper.

"EU sanctions have already hit Russia dearly, depriving its war machine of over €1 trillion ($1.16 trillion) and for autumn I am putting forward the most extensive sanctions listings since the start of the war," she told German daily newspaper Die Welt.

"Once adopted, they will immediately raise the total number of sanctioned entities by a third. The pressure must keep growing until Moscow ends its war."
