Azerbaijan and the countries of Central Asia have the potential to transition to closer economic cooperation, President of Tajikistan Emomali Rahmon stated in Avaza at the 8th Consultative Meeting of the Heads of State of Central Asian countries and Azerbaijan, Report's correspondent in Turkmenistan informs.

According to him, the countries of the region possess significant resource potential, which creates broad opportunities for implementing joint projects.

"This opens up broad opportunities for creating joint ventures, industrial complexes, and processing natural resources," Rahmon said.
