KAZAKHSTAN PLANS TO BUILD URANIUM RESERVE OF 150,000 TONS BY 2050

-

03.11.2026

Kazinform (2 November 2026)

Kazakhstan is considering the creation of a state strategic uranium reserve to secure fuel supplies for its future nuclear power plants, Qazinform News Agency quotes Chairman of the Atomic Energy Agency Almassadam Satkaliyev as saying.

According to Satkaliyev, the agency is reassessing its approach to uranium resource management, viewing uranium not only as a raw material but also as a strategic resource for Kazakhstan's long-term economic development.

Click for more

Kaynak/Source: