Beijing will also continue to suspend collection of special port fees on US-linked ships until January next year

China on Monday said it has extended the suspension of its additional 24% tariff on US imports and special port fees on US-linked ships for two months.

Beijing will continue to suspend the 24% additional tariff rate on imports originating in the US for two months but keep the 10% additional tariff rate in place, state-run Xinhua News reported, citing the Customs Tariff Commission of the State Council.
