Spokesman Dmitry Peskov says decision also bars Armenia from appointing representatives to key posts within organization.

The Collective Security Treaty Organization (CSTO) has decided to strip Armenia of its voting rights and its right to appoint representatives to key positions within the bloc, Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov said Wednesday.

Speaking to Russian journalist Alexander Yunashev of Life, Peskov said the decision was made during the CSTO summit in accordance with the organization's charter, citing Armenia's failure to fulfill its obligations for several years.
