The question of who speaks for Europe has never been more consequential, but the EU doesnt have an answer.

EU leaders gathering in Dublin on Friday will continue arguing over who should represent them in talks about Ukraines future after a day of ferocious diplomatic activity.

As Donald Trumps administration intensifies its efforts to broker an end to Russias war and Europe may have secured a place at the table, bickering over who will speak on behalf of the bloc already looks like overshadowing the summit in the Irish capital that wasnt even supposed to be about Ukraine in the first place.
