The European Parliament has received a request to waive the immunity of a German far-right MEP to allow his prosecution for allegedly drink-driving and violently assaulting a minor with a baseball bat.

Parliament president Roberta Metsola confirmed having received a request to waive immunity of Arno Bausemer, of the Europe of Sovereign Nations hard-right group who is also the Alternative for Germany treasurer for Saxony-Anhalt, on Wednesday (11 November), so that east German region can prosecute him.

Bausemer is accused of attacking a 14-year-old with a baseball bat during the states election campaign in August.
