Bulgaria will no longer supply Ukraine with weapons and ammunition from its army stocks and will not contribute to a new round of European financing for Kyiv, Prime Minister Rumen Radev said, citing budget constraints and depleted reserves.

"We no longer provide weapons and ammunition from the Bulgarian armys depots," Radev told reporters at the European Political Community summit in Dublin, according to Bulgarian outlet Debati.bg.

"Regarding financial aid, we ourselves are in an excessive deficit procedure, and Ms. Ursula von der Leyen has repeatedly asked us to reduce the deficit below the 3% limit," he said.
