Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan has said that Armenias proposed new Constitution is intended to establish a new vision for the country, based on the internationally recognized territory of the Republic of Armenia, and to make peace irreversible.

Speaking during a parliamentary Q&A session, Pashinyan said the constitutional reform concerns not merely the text of the Constitution but also the countrys vision and model of statehood.

According to the Prime Minister, the concept and ideology of the proposed new Constitution are based on the idea of Real Armenia, which envisages consolidating the Republic of Armenia within its internationally recognized borders, closing the chapter of conflicts and developing the state for future generations.
