Kazakh President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev met with Igor Krasnov, Chairman of the Supreme Court of Russia, to discuss bilateral relations and judicial cooperation, Qazinform News Agency reports, citing Akorda.

During the meeting, Tokayev highlighted the special nature of Kazakh-Russian relations, which are rooted in shared history, good-unneighborly ties, mutual respect and strong connections between the peoples of the two countries.

The President noted that elevating bilateral relations to the level of comprehensive strategic partnership and alliance requires the consistent development of cooperation across all key areas, including the legal sphere.
